Green Laws Shaping Professional Standards

by Kuba Brown

On September 21, the New York Post did a hatchet job on the green building industry. In a copyrighted article, the Post said the U.S. Green Building Council's rating system, known as Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) doesn't make buildings more energy efficient. Writer Jacob Gershman even singled out the Hearst Tower (at right), where buildings systems are operated by Local 94 members, as a "green" skyscraper with "its lights blazing at night."

Well, Local 94 takes this opportunity to differ with the New York Post. Our engineers have documented tremendous energy and water savings in the operation of the Hearst Tower. Gershman cites no figures which back up his argument about the Hearst Tower — but we have plenty. As we documented in the last issue of The Cutting Edge, the Tower is in fact a national model for conservation technologies. If lights are on at night in the Tower, the motion sensors may not be operating — and that's the responsibility of building management, not a design flaw. Of course, the buildings need to operate as designed, not by by-passing the automatic controls.

Germany and other developed countries are well advanced in energy efficiency, and we'd better catch up or miss the train. Building systems like those in the Hearst Tower are crucial to growing our economy while reducing greenhouse gas emissions and energy use.

Another rebuttal to the Post's article came on September 23, when Crain's New York Business, in a feature article, reported that building green high-rise towers doesn't cost more than erecting a standard residential or commercial building. The author, Amanda Fung, reports that the cost of LEED-compliant materials is dropping as green building goes mainstream. Studies also show that green buildings outperform non-green buildings in occupancy, sale price, and rental rates.

Where does this leave Local 94? With the City proposing new green legislation, it gives us the opportunity to be the go-to Union when it comes to the professionals who are going to be maintaining these green buildings. The City Council has proposed a package of three bills — 476A, 564A, and 967A — that begin to define who will be in charge of “benchmarking” buildings (determining how energy efficient they are right now), and then doing “energy audits” of the building to see how well it is doing after improvements.

It's our opinion that both of these important tasks should be performed by Local 94 members. After all, we understand the complexities of each building's energy systems and energy consumption better than anyone else. We know about such details as occupancy, utilization, and schedules as well. We're currently discussing drafts of each bill with the Council to make sure that legislators understand our point of view. We're in favor of green standards—but unlike many others, we have the expertise and know-how to make them work.

Fraternally Yours,

Kuba Brown, Business Manager

Engineer's Daughter Will be a Doctor

Christina Scelfo, 21, is in her senior year at Fordham University, but you can already see her in a lab coat – one of those eager interns in a major hospital, going from patient to patient with a sparkle in her eyes – a desire to know more, learn more, and help more. A winner of a Local 94 scholarship in each of her four years in college, she grew up in a family where one uncle was a pharmacist, another a chiropractor, and her mother worked as a Medical Technologist at the Sloan-Kettering Memorial Cancer Center in Manhattan. Early on, Christina was impressed by the care and compassion one of the top doctors at Sloan-Kettering showed to her grandmother, Grace Belmonte, who had ovarian cancer. She decided she wanted to follow in his footsteps.

You could say Christina's dad, Ralph, is also in the health care business, though it would be a bit of a stretch. A Local 94 member for 25 years, he makes sure buildings owned by Boston Properties stay healthy. He's justly proud of his daughter, who earlier this year won the Leahy Renaissance Award through her Dean's office. The award gave her ten weeks this past summer at the world's most renowned university, Oxford, in London, England, where she studied transplant immunology at the Nuffield Department of Surgery. “I made a lot of friends at the lab,” she says, and, meeting Christina, it's not hard to see why. One thing that surprised her was how young the British doctors were, because of the shorter course of study.

From interning at Sloan-Kettering after her Freshman year to working – also as an intern – in the Emergency Department at Bellevue Hospital, Christina has taken every opportunity to advance her medical career. A double major in Biology and English, she's also a star at extra-curricular activities, running Fordham's Relay For Life, which benefits cancer care, and raising $75,000. A dancer for 17 years, Christina also finds time to compete in an urban dance team, where her talents run the gamut from ballroom to hip hop.

But it's the medicine that's most important. Recalling her time at Bellevue – the hospital which is always the first choice of police officers who are injured -- she says: “I got to really interact with patients, and when a trauma came in, we'd all help out. It's really hands-on.” Christina will be applying to medical school soon. Down the road, you just might be one of her patients. Count yourself lucky if you are.

New York City held its first Labor Day Parade in 1882 and the meaningful tradition carries on today. The New York City Central Labor Council's annual Labor Day march up Fifth Avenue was held on Saturday, September 12, 2009.

The day began with a Mass celebrated by Archbishop Timothy Dolan, who was greeted with a procession of Union banners. The parade kicked off about 10:00 a.m. with a moment of silence at 10:30 a.m. to honor 9-11 victims.

Local 94 joined forces with Locals 14, 15, 30 and 891 and as a group all the Operating Engineer locals marched up Fifth Avenue together. Local 94's Pipes and Drums played along with Local 30's pipe band.

A barbecue was held back at the union hall for all 94 members and their families who participated in the parade. Thanks to all those who supported this annual tradition and look forward to an even bigger turnout next year.

At the Parade: Ed Christian, Business Manager of Local 14; Jack Ahern, President of the Central Labor Council and Business Manager of Local 30; James Callahan, Business Manager of Local 15; Kuba Brown; and Robert Troeller, President of Local 891.

Fighters for Working People

On Tuesday, September 15, 2009, the New York City Primary Election was held. As communicated in our last newsletter, Local 94's Political Action Committee endorsed a slate of candidates committed to fighting for our Union's members and families. While not every one of the candidates the Union endorsed was successful in the election, the vast majority of those whom we chose to support won their primary election battles. We congratulate those candidates and our members whose votes contributed to their successes.

As you know, this year's General Election is particularly important because all three city-wide offices of Mayor, Comptroller, and Public Advocate are being sought by formidable candidates and long-time friends of the Union. During their tenure in elected office, current Comptroller Bill Thompson and Council Members John Liu and Bill de Blasio have been effective advocates for our Union and membership.

Comptroller Bill Thompson, an enthusiastic advocate for the enforcement of the State's prevailing wage law, has always made time for Local 94 and other labor organizations to voice their opinions and concerns. He not only understands the labor movement, but he makes it a point to stand up and be at the forefront of the movement. We believe he has the character, experience, and intelligence to be a great Mayor for the working people of New York City.

Local 891's Robert Troeller with Local 94 Business Manager Kuba Brown stand with Mayoral Candidate Thompson; Kuba Brown and Tom Costello with Bill De Blasio, our candidate for Public Advocate. Below, John Liu, who we are endorsing for Comptroller.

Council Member John Liu, a voice for labor in the City Council for the past eight years, has used his office to fight for the issues that affect working New Yorkers. Whether it be his efforts on the Willets Point development project that resulted in guarantees of union jobs and affordable housing or his scrupulous oversight of the MTA as Chairman of the City Council's Committee on Transportation that resulted in the discovery of $500 million of taxpayer funds hidden by the agency, John has demonstrated that he will jealously guard our City's working men and women. He will be a financial watchdog that will serve our City well as the next Comptroller.

Council Member Bill de Blasio, an outspoken advocate in the City Council for the past eight years, has led the charge in protecting workers' rights, child welfare, affordable housing, and social services as Chairman of the City Council's Committee on General Welfare. He has much to show for his tireless efforts on behalf of the City's most vulnerable. Bill has secured greater rights for tenants through legislation. He was instrumental in securing funding for the Administration for Children's Services and decreasing the caseloads of social workers so that they could give each case the time it deserves. Additionally, Bill has been committed to developing the City's workforce, safeguarding workers' rights, and spurring development. He has secured funding for citywide job training; advocated for green and sustainable jobs; sought to incentivize infrastructure projects; pushed for the creation of prevailing wage jobs; and supported workers' rights to organize. As the City's next Public Advocate, Bill will be a strong voice for organized labor and the City's working class.

Although we were quite pleased by the results of the Primary Election, we cannot become complacent as the General Election approaches. To ensure that the interests of this Union are best represented by our elected leaders, we urge all of our members and families to support those candidates identified by the Political Action Committee.

The Cutting Edge, the Newsletter of Local 94, 94A, 94B, I.U.O.E., is produced quarterly at the Union's offices at 331-337 West 44th Street, New York, NY 10036. Copies are sent free to Union Members. Editor: Tom Costello. Associate Editors: Neal Tepel and Alan Saly

Our Man in the 4th

We may not have many members in Dan Garodnick's Council District (it runs from Yorkville on the Upper East Side down to Stuyvesant Town on 14th Street), but we certainly work in many of its major buildings. And we're proud to support Dan for another term.

As a Freshman Councilmember, he's already made a major mark as an advocate for green energy and better buildings. He authored the New York City Energy Code to improve energy efficiency in buildings, which are the source of 80 percent of the city's greenhouse gas emissions. He co-sponsored the bills constituting the "Greater Greener Buildings Plan" of the City of New York. And he's outspoken on alternative energy and opposes the drilling for gas in our upstate watershed.

If you live in the 4th, we recommend a vote for Dan on election day. If you work there, let everyone know he's the candidate that supports working people and a sustainable environment.

In Sunset Park, Brooklyn: We Make Some Noise...

Sunset Park was the focus last month of Local 94's fight against a decision made by the New York City Department of Education to allow a non-union contractor to do union work. The hiring of Temco Service Industries to perform engineering work at the school breaks a 60-year tradition of Local 94 Operating Engineers in every large New York City school building. In that time, we've built an enviable safety record and have successfully provided heating and cooling services to over a million students each year.

Besides the situation in Sunset Park, we also faced the possibility of a Staten Island high school going non-Union, as well.

We thought it was about time that the Sunset Park community knew what we do and why we are determined to fight Temco. So we organized a major rally on the first day of school, bringing the rat and a lot of attention to Sunset Park High School in Brooklyn. And we got their attention.

Our message to the communities in Sunset Park and Staten Island was simple: in order to skirt prevailing wage rules, the New York City Department of Education is willing to jeopardize the safety of school children. Mayor Bloomberg talks about school safety and accountability, but he won't mandate that the DOE hire qualified and licensed Local 94 engineers to operate and maintain Sunset Park High School's mechanical systems.

We told community members that the first employee hired by Temco Service Industries and the Department of Education was demoted and reassigned after less than a week on the job. We encouraged them to call 311 and City Council-

But our message was heard, thanks to the dedication of the union members who showed up to walk the line.

woman Sara Gonzales to let them know their views. Community members read our pamphlets, and heard our protest, even as the NYPD kept our members away from the school entrance in a "free speech zone."

At the same, we were in negotiations with the City and discussions with Temco that turned out to be productive. Local 94 members are now on the job at both locations, providing the service we are known for.

And Get Some Allies!

We would like to thank all the strike captains who took time out of their schedules to promote the Union's agenda for the future. The meeting was very successful. The agenda covered health and safety issues on the job, Employee Free Choice Act legislation and Local 94's roll in city politics. These strike captains should be recognized for their contribution to Local 94. Each and every strike captain will assist Local 94 in promoting workplace safety and our legislative agenda for the future. These special members have committed to Local 94 to reach out to the entire membership to promote our health and safety, political and legislative agenda. If you would like to be a strike captain, please contact your business agent. The above is a list of members who serve, at no cost to the membership, and they are recognized for their dedication to this Union. We thank them again for their service to this organization.
